What is family income?

- . Family income corresponds to net income* for 2018.
- · If you have a spouse as of December 31, your family income refers to your net income" plus that of your spouse.
- * As defined by Revenu Québec.

Less than $78 320

No additional contribution is payable. Your daily rate remains at $8.25 per child

Basic daily

For separated parents

- . The additional contribution is calculated using the family income of the parent who is responsible for the basic rate in accordance with the signed subsidized childcare services agreement.
- If separated parents share responsibility for the basic rate, the additional contribution will be calculated separately according to the family income of each parent.
- . If either parent has a spouse as of December 31, their family income includes the income of their spouse.

More than $166 320 Your additional daily contribution is $13.20 for the first child. It is added to your basic daily contribution of $8.25 per child.

+$13.20°

For families with two or more children

- The additional contribution is reduced by 50% for the second child
- There is no additional contribution for the third child and subsequent children
- The child's rank is determined by the number of days of subsidized childcare and, in the event of a tie, by the children's ages (from the oldest to the youngest)

SECOND CHILD: THE ADDITIONAL CONTRIBUTION IS REDUCED BY 50%

The basic daily rate of $8.25 per child goes directly to your subsidized childcare service.

Any additional contribution, adjusted to your family income, is paid to Revenu Québec through source deductions or tax instalments, or when you file your tax return.

- Ask your employer to withhold more Québec income tax at the source.
- If you are self-employed, increase the amount of your tax instalments.
- . Set aside the amount of your additional contribution.

On December 3, 2018, in the Update on Québec's Economic and Financial Situation, the Government announced its intention to freeze the additional subsidized childcare contribution at the level set in 2018. In addition, on March 21, 2019, in its 2019-2020 Budget Speech, the Government also announced the plan for gradual abolition of the additional contribution, which provides for the abolition, in 2019, of the additional contribution payable for families earning between $52,220 and $78,320. These undertakings are conditional on amendments to the applicable legislation and regulations. For information purposes, this page presents the 2019 fee levels for childcare services, adjusted to reflect the changes announced by the Government.
